Chicago Grain and Produce. CHICAGO, June 9.—The government crop report today was a demoralizer to the Chicago board of trade, Statistician Dodge filed it in Washington at 12 o'clock, which gave the report to the trade promptly at Many houses had arrangements made for the earliest possible information and those who got the most information were the worst off. The figures made a bedlam of the pit for an hour. No two men could solve the puzzle alike. At the first flash it looked like a bull report and July jumped from 85%c to 86%c, while operators were crossing the Then it was construed in anslumped and prices off nearly 2c in short order, and July sold at 84%c before 12 o'clock. The trade was greatly excited. Outside orders came in and before they could be filled prices had changed ic, and by the time the outsider was informed that his order was filled at Sings the wires told him the price was 81%c. The figures showed a slight increase in condition, making the winter wheat crop 7%, while it gave an increase of about per cent. The second bulge in wheat continued to the close, July wheat selling to 86 10 86 to and closing at 86 to. Corn received some of the with wheat and on the break July went down to 156c, reacting to 52%c and clos-Provisions were dull and heavy during the early trading and prices declined slightly in sympathy with the liberal offerings and 5@10c lower prices for hogs. After the flurry in wheat the situation changed, and instead of their being all seliers and no buyers it was the reverse. Prices advanced 10c on all speculative articles and closing sales were at an advance of 5c over yesterday's last sales. July pork sold at $12,95@14.05, and closed at $14.05; July lard at $8.525 (#8.625, and closed at the top, January $7.87 3 467.92 5. The leading futures ranged as follows:

THE VANILLA BEAN.

ITS CULTURE AND VALUE AS A COMMERCIAL COMMODITY.

How the Beans Are Prepared for the Market-A Picture That Is Not Particularly Charming-Curing the Beans. Prices and Markets.

Cortez Bozarris Pedetro, of Mexico, was at a hotel the other evening. To a reporter he "If I did not intend to go back to Mexico

I could tell you some things about the country that would open the eyes of the Americans who think of going there to invest mines or anything else, but it would not be the best thing for my future happiness if I expect to dwell among them. The few wealthy Americans who go there for pleasure and to meet the president and drink his health receive a wrong impression of the feeling in Mexico toward Americans in general. It's all right to raise the glass and claim, 'Long live the president!' but I'll tell you that there is no more freedom in Mex-ico, and no more regard for the will of the majority, than there is in Russia. I had forgotten myself, however, and will now speak of the vanilla bean, its culture and its value as a commercial commodity. This is the costliest bean on earth, and there are two places in Mexico where it flourishes-Papantla, in the state of Vera Cruz, and Misantla; but the first place mentioned is the most important, and I will speak of it to

"This town, of about 10,000 inhabitants, is in the land of the Toeonaco Indians, who speak their own dialect, rarely cut their hair or shave their beard, take a bath only once a year and are as indolent and improvident as any people on earth. The vanilla grows on a vining plant, which is found wild in the forests round about Papantla, clinging to the trees and bushes for support.

WHEN THE BEANS RIPEN. "The beans begin to ripen the latter part of November or the first of December, and then the natives take their children and go out into the forests and gather beans until they get all they can carry. All kinds are put into their old sacks together, and are brought into the town of Papantla to market. Here there are a number of buyers, being principally Spaniards or Americans, and the competition in trade reminds one very much of a street where second hand stores prevail, and runners are out soliciting the trade of the natives. The old women are generally in the lead, half naked, perhaps, with bare breasts, long, disheveled hair, and haggard faces begrimed with sweat and dirt. Then come the children, equally pitiable in appearance, and finally the old men bring up the rear Their long, stiff hair, matted and dirty, sometimes standing out twelve or fif-teen inches, while their heards, filthy and long, lend a finish to the picture that is most

"The beans are purchased by the middle men at the rate of $10 or $13 per 1,000, taken as they are put up by the natives. One thou sand good sized green vanilla beans will weigh sixty pounds; when cured, about ten counds. The first fine morning planks are arranged and covered with quilts, on which the beans are laid after being divested of their stems. The sweating process, as it is called, then takes place, and has to be re-peated seven times before all the water is out. Then the beans are heated slightly and placed on rows of shelves to dry and air, after which the assorting process takes place, and they are placed in packages containing fifty beaus, each variously graded. hree weeks would be sufficient time for the ing if fine weather could be had, but this is rarely the case, and it sometimes takes from four to five months Last year the beans sold for $14 a hundred, which was about a pound, but owing to a heavy crop this year and the growing competition in the business, we have to sell our best beans at $12 a pound, or hundred, and the inferior at from $7 to $10. The principal markets for vanilla beans are New York, St Louis and Chicago. They are bought chiefly by wholesale druggists and fine confectioners and are becoming an important article of Mexican commerce. Last year, in the vicinity of Papantia alone, 60,600,000 were exported. -St. Louis Republican.

Cured by a Whaling Trip A young fellow who had been coddled into a nuisance by a foolish mother "took a notion" one summer to go off on a whaling trip and work his passage. He was one of the most fastidious members of a select circle of young society men, and nothing had ever been quite good enough for him. His mother would kill him, but somewhere in him there was the blood of an old sen captain, and this asserted itself. "Mother," he said, "I shall am sick of my useless life; let me try myself other men, and have not as much nerve and strength as they." His mother had had her fears excited lest he was developing a consumptive tendency, and finally yielded a re-luctant assent. She wanted to load him down water. But the old captain's blood in him was up, and he would none of it. "No, mother," said he, "I am going to rough it, live on hard tack, pork and molasses, just as the rest do, and see if I can stand it. I may come home and be taken care of, but I'll try it any way." He did try it—lost his dudyism and cyni-cism, also his consumptive tendencies; took on health, breath, a manful tone and appearance, acquired new ideas of life, and, in short, turned out to be a first class sailor, and finally a merchant whose ships sailed the wide sea over.—Jennie June in St. Louis Re-publican

Dieppe boasts fish markets innumerable; and here it is that one looks in vain for the frowsy headed, burly fish woman of Great Britain, for the Mme. Angots of France are very careful of their appearance. So, too, are their grand dames, who are disposed of throughout the whole market place, wherever an unoccupied bushel basket or particularly sunny nook may be found; these old creatures are never in the way of the rising generation; and a thousand times in the course of our rambles you will have reason to wonder if you have not accidentally come across an enlarged edition of a certain carving, seen but an hour or so ago, as the case may be. There they sit, with white starched caps flaring in the sun, immaculate kerchiefs folded demurely around the faded throat, and the inevitable piece of knitting to satisfy the restless hands that have so long been strangers to idieness. In this country it is strikingly noticeable how differently was soft and ruddy, becomes a peculiar nut brown, marked by many deep wrinkles that are particularly prominent because of the remarkable wax like surface on which they are indented, and so it is small wonder that those aged specimens of French humanity are often mistaken in a manner, for their miniature fac-similes in clay, to whom bey bear such a striking resemblance.—Cor. Phil-delphia Times.

Instantaneous rnotographs.

Instantaneous photographs of birds flying are valuable for physiological uses, but are certainly not artistic. The British Journal Messrs. Bayley & Batte, civil engineers and surveyors, have mored their office to 129 East Douglas, upstairs, where they are ready to make surveys of lots and additions, furnish maps, blue prints and other general engineering work. Their last piece of engineering was to build the race track for the Wichita Exposition and Interstate Fair association. Give them a call.
